Course Descriptions

Important Deadline: Closing date for early bird registrations is April 1, 2019. Courses with insufficient registrations on this date are subject to cancellation.

1. Facing Management Effectively

Effectively examines the economic, political and social forces at play between union and management. Participants can expect participation, interaction and roleplaying along with practical skills and tools for communication, analysis, strategy and critical thinking.

2. Unionism on Turtle Island

This course is designed for non-Indigenous workers who want to learn more about Indigenous issues and who want to work in solidarity with their First Nations and Metis members. Issues to be discussed will include history, spirituality, creating a representative workforce, Indigenous issues and the bargaining table, and opening the union to Indigenous activists. This course will provide a comfortable and supportive environment in which to explore your attitudes, ideas and questions. Indigenous workers are also welcome to enroll in this course.

3. Health and Safety Activism and your Mental and Physical Health

Healthy and safe workplaces are a basic right. This workshop will provide worker activists with tools, materials, and processes to address this key area of work life. You will develop an understanding of how workplace stress and other psychosocial hazards can affect us and how to deal with them. The workshop will help identify stressors affecting workers such as job demands, job control, lack of support, and violence/bullying resulting in a lack of work life balance. It will help develop an action to take on systematic factors affecting mental health through advocacy, bargaining and political action. We will discuss health and safety issues important to workers and focus on solutions and prevention strategies to reduce stress and eliminate hazards.

4. Domestic Violence At Work

This course will help shop stewards, health and safety representatives and other union representatives gain a deeper understanding of the dynamics of domestic violence at work and the role of the union and employer in addressing it. Participants will learn ways to best support members who may be experiencing domestic violence, including how to recognize and respond to the warning signs and risk factors and how to connect members to support and services in the community. Union representatives will also leave with tools to build awareness in the workplace about domestic violence at work.

5. Member Engagement - Member Action

This course is designed for experienced shop stewards, local union leaders and union staff who want to transform how members engage with their union and how their union engages with their members. This course will train participants on the three-step approach to effective member engagement (Go, Listen, Build) and connect it to a three-step approach for building an active membership (one-on-one communication, taking action on worksite issues, and designing a strategy and plan to win).

6. Pre-retirement Planning “What Are You Doing After Work?”

This course will get people thinking about the main factors in planning for retirement with emphasis on finances and retirement goals. While finances are a major part of retirement planning, this course will also delve into relationships, living conditions, retirement activities, women in retirement, health and wellbeing. Designed by retired union members, this course is for members who are retiring soon, considering early retirement or on the verge of a layoff. Whether you negotiate terms of a pension plan, serve as a pension trustee or just have an interest in knowing more about retirement in general, this course is for you.
